Students are encouraged to make the best use of each course assignment by using each course to develop and incorporate the research into the dissertation.

During Phase 2, students should begin informal discussions with potential organizations to determine whether the doctoral student's research is of interest to the organization and to determine what organizational permissions are necessary. Students cannot begin data collection until the University of Phoenix Institutional Review Board (IRB) approval of the study. Review of the student's research by the IRB begins following completion of Phase 4 and the start of Phase 5. Therefore, it is wise to begin investigating potential venues for data collection during Phase 2.

Students should be prepared as appendices for their proposal and IRB submissions. The AD4 IR 7407 document provides a good overview of what to include in students' IRB applications and what to expect in IRB reviews. Students starting DOC/723 on or after 10/1/2019 will be assigned chairs and University Research Methodologists (URM) upon completion of Phase 2.
